With regard to the MARTA Branch website, there is only one, new feature to which I would like to draw your attention: a new events calendar. It is easily accessed on the top margin of the website home page, and it lists all of the events for the current year in chronological order, from January onward. Simply scroll down the list and click on any title to view the details of each event.

This new calendar even includes an interactive map feature. Click on any event title and once the details open, you will find the event venue's address given near the top of the page. At the end of the address line, there is a small rectangle with the word "map" printed in it. Click on it, and it will take you to the exact street location of the scheduled event. It may not be used by everyone, but it is a great convenience to those who like the clarity and convenience of such tech apps.

I wish each of you an enjoyable summer and all things good in life.
